● ABOUT ME

As a passionate and dedicated Ph.D. scholar in International Relations, my objective is to utilise my research expertise to address critical social issues and contribute to sustainable development in the region. My aim is to conduct innovative research, publish high-impact papers, and engage in meaningful collaborations with local and international stakeholders to create positive change.

PERSONAL STATEMENT

My academic journey has instilled in me a deep-rooted commitment to understanding and addressing complex social issues through research. With a strong foundation in research methodologies, data analysis, and project management, I have been able to explore various facets of peace-building, conflict resolution, and development in my research. My passion for exploring the intersection between religion and politics, NGOs, and the Pakhtun culture has driven me to conduct innovative research and contribute to the existing body of knowledge. As a Ph.D. scholar in International Relations, I am determined to leverage my skills and expertise to contribute towards sustainable development and foster positive change in the region.
